Ninos de la Luz

The La Baliza Ranch is home to three distinct ministries: La Villa Solana Home, a long term family style home for former street kids, the Life Navigation School, for adolescents leaving institutionalized care and our Escuelita La Baliza Elementary School.

The first home on the ranch, The Villa Solana, houses 12 former street children. The Villa Solana is not an orphanage but a real home with loving parents,

Living in the family style home, the boys are nurtured by their house parents and their staff "tios" and "tias" (uncles and aunts), allowing Christian values and life lessons not only to be taught, but also "caught" as they live life together.

The Life Navigation School helps youth plot a course for their life adventure so that they can step into the unknown with more assurance. Their staff focus on discipline, guiding and equipping these kids for successful integration into independent living. The goal of La Baliza is to give former street kids from various institutions a chance to look to the future with excitement and not apprehension and to view their future as an adventure just waiting to be lived out.

The Escuelita La Baliza began ten years ago with the discovery of children in their neighborhood unable to attend school due to poverty. They were invited to visit the La Baliza Ranch two days a week to be tutored by the residential missionaries. It was quickly discovered that most of the kids, even those around the ages of nine and ten years old, did not know how to read, do math, or even name their colors. Seeing the extent of their need for education, it was decided that NDLL had to do more. What started as two days a week turned into every day and more and more children began to come. Eventually the parents, who had never had the opportunity to go to school, also began asking if they could attend. The one room schoolhouse eventually grew to 25 students from the ages of 4 to 40.
